Because each stationery suite is unique in design, it is also unique in pricing. I often have calls or emails asking how much something will cost that is shown on my website. Truth is, I can give you the price for that clients order, but your requirements will almost undoubtedly be different, hence why everything is bespoke.

ITEMS

I have to conduct a consultation with you in person so I can get your full order. Once you have seen my previous commissions you may decide to add extra items into your spec. Or you may want to order just invites and nothing else, and you will probably want to order different quantities. This all effects the price.

SIZE

The printing cost is also calculated by the physical size of each item and the complexity of the printing, you might want to change the size of the pieces or add in an embossing or other print technique. I must liase with my printer and have to always send him a fully drawn up spec each time. By having a meeting with you it means I can get all of this information so you get an accurate costing.

COMPLEXITY

Costs are based on the intricacy of each design, as well as the printing techniques, materials and any specialist papers required. Each exclusive wedding commission takes between 30 and 120 hours to complete, from the initial consultation to the final assembly. All items are put together and made up by hand once printed so the larger the quantity, the longer it will take to put together, again effecting the overall price.

Put simply, I really need certain pieces of information to quote from and a meeting with you will clarify all my questions. From here I will be able to work out how long your job will take in full and give you an appropriate quote. I can get a quote back to you in a few days and it will be fully broken down by all the processes involved. The quote will also include the drawing that was sent to my printer so you can check all items you requested are included.

I appreciate that often you need to stick to a certain budget and I can advise what elements you could have within your allocated amount during our meeting.

As a rough guide, my prices start from £1800* (based on a simple digitally printed design and up to 60 copies including: invitations, information cards, rsvps, envelopes, menus, order of service and thank you cards with envelopes).

For a smaller package (consisting of digitally printed invitations, rsvps, information cards and envelopes only, again up to 60 copies), prices start from £900*.

A full quotation based on your personal requirements would be provided after your initial consultation. The cost would be broken down by the various processes involved i.e. design fee, printing, handfinishing cost, materials etc.

The initial consultation and first quotation are provided free of charge. Following this, if you would then like a further quotation to look at alternative design formats or cost savings there would be a charge of £50 per each additional quote. This is to cover the additional time spent re-costing the project. If you subsequently were to place an order for your stationery, the charge of £50 per additional quote would be waived.
